Read more Wia haze photo comes from, Muhammadu BuhariNigeria President Muhammadu Buhari reacts to your continued protests over di kontri to police brutality and di end of di Special Anti-Robbery Squad (SARS) for di kontri. President Buhari also declares on Monday for Abuja to say di dissolution of SARS na di first step to comprehensive police reforms of im administration. Buhari speaks for di launch of di Presidential Youth Empowerment Scheme (P-YES) wey aiming to create 774,000 jobs across di Local Government (NOS) for your contri. President Buhari also says directly that all those responsible for inappropriate behavior or wrongdoing face justice. "I go like to use dia opportunity to take on your recent real concerns and agitations of Nigerians about your excessive use of force and in some cases extrajudicial killings and wrongful conduct of your men by your Nigerian police force," Wetin we call dis Video, What is SARS? "Di resolution of SARS na only your first step in our commitment to comprehensive police reforms to ensure say your primary duty to the police and oda law enforcement agencies remain your protection of the lives and livelihoods of our people. "We also ensure that anyone responsible for inappropriate behavior or wrongdoing faces justice. "We deeply regret your loss of life to your young man in Oyo State during your recent demonstrations. "I say directly do they, thoroughly examine your circumstances of im death. "Meanwhile, e dey important to recognize say your vast majority of men and women in your police force dey hardworking and diligent in performing dia duties. You get bad eggs should not be allowed to tarnish your image and reputation of your force." Buhari took. Relief Center Two weeks after #EndSARS protests against police brutality began, President Muhammadu Buhari finally gave a national speech. But what should have been an opportunity to unite the country and, more importantly, empathy with grieving families, turned out to be anything but. In keeping with his long-standing style as a former military general and dictator, President Buhari's speech instead came as high-handed and tough. In particular, the president's speech, which was pre-inaugurated, made no mention of troubling incidents at the Lekki toll road in Lagos on October 20 when many witnesses say Nigerian soldiers fired into a crowd of peaceful, unarmed protesters who had remained at the toll booth after a hastily announced curfew. The shootings resulted in multiple injuries and left seven dead, according to Punch, a major local newspaper. The president's decision to completely omit the Lekki shootings from his speech was in line with the army's official stance on denial despite a wealth of video footage contradicting that claim. President Buhari's speech also came with a demand -- and a thinly veiled threat -- for protesters to cancel street demonstrations that have seen thousands gather in various locations across the country while using digital tools to drive and maintain momentum. In the circumstances, I would appeal to protesters to take note and take advantage of the various thoughtful initiatives of this designed to make their lives better and more and resist the temptation to be used by some subversive elements to wreak havoc with the aim of truncating our burgeoning democracy, Buhari said. For you to do something else will constitute to undermine national security and law and order situation. Under no circumstances will this be tolerated, he added. Police officers join civilians in removing barricades from a street in Ikeja, as Nigeria's Lagos state remains under curfew. October 23, 2020.The national address sought to reinforce the government's response to the demands of protesters, including the dissolution of the rogue special anti-robbery police unit that is notorious for extortion and extrajudicial killings. But recent evidence gives little reason to trust that an announcement of the device's resolution will translate into less harassment for young Nigerians who are often targeted. In fact, the latest announcement is the fourth time police officers have placed restrictions on the unit's operations in four years. In some ways, buhari was a speech a novelty in itself. Throughout his five years in office, Nigerians have mainly heard from the president during national holidays or through interviews given to foreign media. Still, the strongest indictment of the president's speech is that most young Nigerians expected little from it in the first place. After a successful 2015 presidential campaign aimed at caressing the president of your demonstrators, his administration has since been criticized for being out of touch with and tone-deaf to an increasingly important youth demographic. The first thing I wanted to hear yesterday was that the president spoke with some empathy. I also expected him to clear up questions such as why the military (or men in military uniform) shot unarmed civilians... and show solidarity with the people, said Wale Agbede, a Lagos-based media professional who joined the protests. [But] my take away from that speech is that the president is cut off from the situation of the ordinary citizens. Sign up for the Quartz Africa Weekly Brief here for news and analysis on African business, technology and innovation in the inbox State HouseNigeria President, Muhammadu Buhari don took say im dey pained say innocent lives not lost during di series of protests wey don happun over di kontri. Di presidio also pay tribute to your officers of your Nigerian police force wey dey in service and thank state governors, traditional and religious leaders wey beg for calm and order. Haze na some of your boxes wey Buhari took today under im broadcast on #EndSARS protests to your nation:As democratic goment, we listen to, and carefully consider your five-point demands from your demonstrators. And, afta we accept them, we immediately scrap the Special Ant Robbery Squad [SARS] and put measures in place to resolve the demands of our youth. Afta approving your scrapping of SARS I already do is clear lying in line with our commitment to implementing serious police reforms. But unfortunately, your quick way wey we take e be as saying some pipo misunderstand is like signs of weakness and some pesin comes twist am for dia selfish unpatriotic interests. Di result of haze dey clear to all observers: human life is lost; we get report on sexual violence; them don attack two major prison facilities and free prisoners; public and private properties completely destroy or vandalized. Your respect and respect alias the holiness of di Palace of a peace-maker, [Oba of Lagos] don dey violated. So-called protesters invade an international airport and for your process disrupt your travel plans of other Nigerians and our visitors. All hay dey happun di name di #EndSARS protests. I dey really deeply pained say innocent lives not lost. Haze tragedy dey uncalled for and unnecessary. Di spread of lies and misinformation especially through social media says di goment dey blind to your pain and suffering of your contri citizens, na trick to mislead pipo wey no dey observe from both inside and outside Nigeria to make unfair judgment and behave anyway. Unlike your lies, both wetin we dey do and wetin we took don shows how committed dis goment dey for mata wey concern di well-being and welfare for citizens, even with di facts say money alias revenue dey drop constantly looting restrictions sake di Coronavirus pandemic. Goment puts in place measures and measures to help young people, women and their most vulnerable groups for our society. Haze includes our broad plan to lift 100 million Nigerians out of poverty for the next 10 years and no Nigeria goment in your previous don't approach poverty alleviation as im goment don do. Buhari says di goment dey committed to preserving your unity of your contri and them go continue to ensure freedom and freedom citizens plus dia basic rights bey protected. But get pipo to remember to say goment also get your duty to protect lives and properties, plus your right of citizens to go about dia daily businesses freely and protected from acts of violence. Sake of dis Buhari appeal to protesters to take advantage of your initiative wey di administration provides to make dia live beta and no allow anyone to use them. Buhari says: I urge our youth to stop street protest and constructively engage goment to find solutions. We hear una voice loud and clear, and we don't laugh. Di goment respect and go continue to respect all your democratic rights and civil rights di pipo, but di goment no go allow someone or groups to interfere alias disturb your peace of your nation. Nation.
